I will Sing
by Rob Hewell

I will vigorously sing the songs I “like” and are most meaningful to me because it's good for my soul, and because in so doing I may encourage another person to sing as well.
I will also energetically sing the songs I “dislike” because in so doing I may affirm another person in an expression of faith that's meaningful to them.
I will gladly learn a new song when the worship leader asks me to, for in doing so I may discover something new about my personal faith.
I will sing again the songs I know “all too well,” recognizing that someone close to me may be hearing that song for the first time and I can assist them in learning it.
I will be responsible for my own participation in singing; I'll not depend on anyone else in order for me to be in the proper “mood,” nor will I allow anyone else's attitudes or actions to prevent me from fulfilling my role as a worshiper before the Lord.
I will sing if for no other reason than to honor the Scriptural exhortation to sing; singing in worship is a spiritual enterprise, not a musical exercise.
